Changing energy suppliers can save you up to \in 700 for one of the quickest jobs you can do

MAGINE making €70 a minute... or €700 for 10 minutes' work. Who makes that kind of money? Top hospital consultants? Nope. At around €200 per visit, they get much less. The Taoiseach? No. He gets €208,000 a year, or around €113 per hour.

So Micheál Martin pockets a mere €19 for every 10 minutes work.

Incredibly, most householders could make 40 times more than An Taoiseach at least once a year - yet most simply don't bother to do so.

All we have to do switch energy providers – or even just ring up and threaten to do so.

Only 15% of us switch. And if we do nothing, we pay an average of €2,099 a year – when we could be paying less than €1,400.

The energy market, like many others, makes most of its money through customer inertia.

It offers cracking discounts when you sign up.

Providers do so because they know most people don't switch. And when a year is up, you can be clobbered.

If you do switch, you save a fortune – at the expense of the majority who don't bother.

We've been banging on about this for years but the number of people who do anything about it remains stubbornly small.

The reasons are many: time pressure, lack of awareness and a deep aversion to anything to do with numbers. It's also hard to remember exactly when to switch unless you put a note on the calendar or in your diary. Providers are supposed to write to you to let you know in advance when your contract is ending. Mine said that they did but I don't recall these letters and they are easily dismissed or forgotten about when they do arrive.

This is why a new type of switching service has been set up to do all the work for you.

Now you don't even have to do 10 minutes work to make over €700. All you have to do is sign up once to www.weswitchu.ie - and be automatically switched every year to the best deals on the market.

'At the last count, over 1,500 switches have been processed with an average saving of €550 each," said Brendan Halpin who left a job in the energy sector to set up the new business

He claims that the website gives an even better service than com-

Save by switching, even if you can't be bothered

IT'S SHOCKINGLY EASY TO REDUCE ELECTRICITY BILL

MY own energy deals for gas and electricity have just expired with Flogas and Energia respectively.

If I did nothing I would lose the discounts I was on and my energy bills would soar from less than €1,400 to over €2,000.

I rang both companies to see if they could give me a better deal. And lo and behold, they had fantastic offers just waiting for me to call. Flogas immediately offered a 34% discount, Weswitchu.ie? Would its ability to tailor an parison sites as it can tailor each deal to your individual profile. Often, even savvy switchers base their choices on average energy usage, which can mean getting a slightly worse deal than if you choose a plan that suits how much

'(We) can immediately tailor

the best tariff to the energy con-energy you actually use.

sumption profile of the customer,' said Mr Halpin.

For example, people with little energy usage might do better opting for a deal that pays the biggest cashback lump sum. But those who burn through a lot of gas and electricity should just go for the biggest discount.

while Energia said they could cut my prospective bill by 29% You can be sure neither would have offered anything had I not taken action. The squeaky wheel gets the grease

If I opted for these deals I would save €696 a year, based on average energy consumption. But could I do better with comparison sites Switcher.ie and Bonkers.ie? And what about > consumption as we track our customers' usage through a dedicated customer dashboard account,' he said.

If you want to switch yourself, there's a handy guide on the Commission for Regulation of Utilities website (www.cru.ie). It advises: 'For electricity switches energy package to my needs pay off. As you can see from the table, yes I could. All three comparison sites beat Flogas and Energia, offering to save me well over €700 on my bills. My inclination is to sign up to Weswitchu.ie in order to save hassle and avoid missing out on any potential discounts. It's a nice feeling to earn 40 times more than the Taoiseach, even if it is just for only 10 minutes!

> Registration Number (MPRN) and for gas you'll need your Gas Point Registration Number (GPRN) These can be found on your current bill. It is also important to provide an up-to-date meter reading when switching, to ensure you are billed accurately

I rang up both my suppliers to see 'In year two we use actual energy you'll need your Meter Point if they offered a better deal. I

Don't wait for green grants to start saving on heating your home

ENERGY SAVER DIY DEVICE	ANNUAL SAVING
Window film	€100
Draught protector	€55
Radiator foil	€46
Chimney Balloon	€45
Energy saving bulbs	€27
TOTAL	€273

WHAT can I do to make my more energy efficient? Our new Green-infused Government will boost energy efficiency in our homes with a range of new incentives expected soon.

It aims to insulate over half a million homes to B1 standard, starting in the midlands, and install heat pumps in up to 600,000 homes by 2030. Until the grants and incentives that will drive that programme become available, householders will be forgiven for putting any plans for major insulation work on their homes on hold. However, there are plenty of cheap and easy DIY tricks we can use now

CONSUMER EYE

By Bill Tyson

to help our home become more energy efficient in the meantime. And with autumn looming and energy bills soaring in the lockdown, now is the time to start.

Here are five simple DIY tricks to get those heating bills down by over €200 a year.

■ Using energy-efficient LED light bulbs could save you €27 per mediumsized house per year, according to Irish environmental website www.

thegreenmohawk.com which tested out the concept.

■ Transparent removable film is available for windows to help keep the heat in until you get around to replacing them when new grants become available. It costs €10 for nine square metres of the stuff at www. purchase.ie which also has a video guide to installing it (with a hair drier). The claimed savings are up to €18 per large window over the winter. or around €100 per home.

■ The simple trick of placing silver foil behind a radiator can bounce heat back into a room. It also might look better than the old wallpaper or paint that's often left behind when we can't

HOW I MADE MASSIVE SAVINGS ON UTILITIES Option

Do nothing

Contact pr Switcher.ie

Bonkers

Weswitchı

*Existing cust

needn't have bothered. While, I can come up with as people will 'Once your account has been pay a little more to avoid hassle. did get a decent offer, it was less switched you will receive a welthan the price comparison sites. There is also no need to notify come letter from your new sup-This is par for the course. Proyour old supplier. When you plier. You will also receive a final switch, your new supplier will do viders know that they can offer bill from your old supplier, the slightly less than the switchers that for you. regulator advises.

	Providers	Annually	Savings
g	Remain with Energia/Flogas	2,099	0
rovider*	New deals offered by Energia/Flogas	1,403	696
е	Iberdola dual	1,371	728
	Flogas dual fuel cashback	1,351	748
u	Bord Gais Best Dual Fuel - 29% Electricity & 38% Gas	1,324	775
tomer offer made to Energia (electricity) and Flogas (gas)

Based on average use of 11000 Kw/h (gas) and 1400 kw (electricity)

get in behind the rads to strip it off. Screwfix sells four-metre rolls for €7.75, claiming it can cut heat loss by up to 50%. Or you can just some ordinary kitchen foil, costing a few cents. Either can be stuck on with wallpaper paste. But Caitlin Bent from Energy Saving Trust, advises: 'Reflective radiator panels are only effective behind radiators on external walls – you don't need to place them behind radiators on internal walls or on walls shared between two properties in a semi-detached or terraced residence.'

Thegreenmohawk.com tested out foil radiator backing and reckons vou can save €46 a year with this simple trick, which isn't bad for half an hour's work and a few cents' worth of kitchen foil. Over 25 years, the financial savings would add up to €1,070. And the environmental savings: 3.3 tonnes less of carbon emissions from this measure alone. ■ Seal gaps with draught protectors. A front door draught excluder costs €10 from Screwfix. For twice that you could get a 15m length for both doors and windows. The savings if you draught-proof an entire home are up to €55 a year, according to Which? magazine.

■ Buy a chimney 'balloon' to seal up that pointless gaping hole in your living room through which 40% of heat escapes. The Electric Ireland store has one for €32 and there are a range of differing sizes on purchase.ie from €27. The savings are €45 annually, so it will more than pay for itself in one year. Don't forget to take it down when you light the fire next winter though!

A QUESTION OF MONEY

Hi-Di-Hi! star Linda wants just enough to buy 'hen-pecked' husband a pint

Actress Linda Regan describes her the biggest money mistake as investing in sex shops and her financial priority as 'to be able to buy a pint of Guinness every day' for her husband George O'Brien, another comedy actor famous for his roles in The Last of the Summe Wine and as the hen-pecked husband in George and Mildred. She has starred in many TV series herself, including The Bill and Holby City but is best known for the 1980s holiday camp sitcom Hi-de-Hi! Linda then became a successfu crime novelist after wanting to write about her experience of being kidnapped at knifepoint 15 years ago and she now relies on book sales for her pension. Her latest book The Terror Within is out now, on sale through Eason. Amazon and other major booksellers.

What did your parents teach you about money?

To work hard for it. My father was a struggling comic and comedy magician when I was a child. He eventually became a variety agent. He was a huge source of inspiration. My mother was a nurse (from Ireland). My parents were pretty penniless when I was young. There were times they struggled to pay for food. I remember my mother cutting the end of my shoes off so my toes could grow out because they couldn't afford a new pair.

But then dad started to do well and he invested his money in property. We became well off as I grew up. I ended up going to a private school and having dance and horse-riding lessons. But I don't think I ever forgot where I came from.

Have you ever struggled to make ends meet?

Yes, when I purchased my first house in the 1980s while in my 20s. I bought a bungalow. It was scary because as an actor you don't know where your next job is coming from. But about a year after I bought it, I got my job on Hi-de-Hi! After that, my life changed. Because I was on TV, I got paid well to do pantomimes and personal appearances. Suddenly I wasn't struggling any more.

Have you ever been paid silly money?

Yes, for TV commercials. In the 1980s, you got paid for repeats of any advert, so you could earn ridiculous amounts of money for a day of filming. I did loads, including one for a building society. I must have earned about £20,000 from that.

What is the most expensive thing you bought for fun?

Some £800 worth of junk jewellery from Topshop. I was a teenager and had just got a cheque for a commercial I'd done, ironically for a diamond company. I went out and bought all this worthless jewellery. My mother nearly killed me.

What is your biggest money mistake?

Oh goodness, that was the fault of actress Liz Fraser. She was wacky and mad and sadly she died in 2018 -I miss her terribly. She always invested in stocks and shares, and shortly after I bought my bungalow she had this idea that we should invest £5,000 each in sex shops. Of course, the shares crashed and I lost all my money in a few months. I can't remember the company's name but I still wince at the financial loss. That was probably the most stupid thing I ever did. I decided never to invest in shares again.

Do you save into a pension?

No. I've never had the spare money or thought or desire to start a pension. Now, because I've written nine crime novels and they've all been quite popular, I'm hoping they'll be my pension. I turned to writing crime novels because I had a terrible incident in 2005 when I was kidnapped. Somebody crawled into my car, put a knife to my throat and drove me away. I don't think it was because he thought I was a celebrity, it was just a genuine carjack. But he wouldn't let me out of the car and he told me I was going to be raped. Those words lived with me for a long time. I was lucky. Eventually, I was able to unlock the door and jump from the car while it was still moving I wasn't in the car that long. But afterwards, the fear in my head wouldn't go away. So I put it down on paper - it was my way of dealing with what happened – and that's how my first book got published.

What is your number one financial priority?

To have enough money to buy my husband a pint of Guinness every day – if he wants one! I don't mind what I've got as long as I can shut myself away and get on with writing my next book.